General A. J. Warner, President of the American Bimetallist League, has returned to Washington from the west where he has been in consultation with prominent silver men. He says the outlook for future success is in the brightest possible condition. In discussing the election he said:

Campbell and Brice were defeated in Ohio by Silver Democrats. In Kentucky Hardin and Blackburn were defeated by gold Democrats. In Maryland Cleveland Democrats defeated Gorman, and Hill was beaten by Republicans in New York. On the whole the elections show dissatisfaction of Democrats everywhere with the policy of the Administration. There is no room for two parties on the same platform anywhere. The gold men stood together, but the silver men divided, but enough of them refused to follow their leaders into the gold camp to bring about the defeat which has been so general.

General Warner says the election shows that in 1896 there cannot be two candidates on the same platform. If the silver element cannot control the Democratic organization and make it the great national silver party there will be such a party in the field next year, and the people will be given a chance to vote on the money issue. That will be the issue and no man will be big enough to prevent it. Cleveland may be nominated by the gold standard Democrats, but if he is it will not injure the silver cause. It is doubtful if he could carry a single State on a gold platform, as there is room for only one party on a gold platform.

The silver men in the Democratic party are in favor of a plain, distinct and unmistakable declaration for the free and unlimited coinage of both gold and silver without regard to the financial policy of England or any other foreign country, and the silver men should redouble their efforts to secure a national organization on that basis. Let Cleveland run for a third term if he wants to. It will only help the silver cause to have Republican and Democratic candidates for the Presidency on the same platform, as it would tend to divide their strength. A national silver party with free coinage of gold and silver its main principle would with two gold big candidates in the field carry every State west of the Alleghenies and south of Pennsylvania.

HOW DID IT HAPPEN?

When a change took place in the State Government last January there were seventy-five or eighty bags of silver dollars in the State Treasury, each containing $1,000. As these coins were paid out it was noticed that they were all bran new and minted in 1893. The members and attaches of the Legislature, State officers and all who had warrants on the State Treasurer received more or less of the silver dollars and the fact that they were all new and coined at Carson in 1893 caused considerable comment. The JOURNAL and a few other papers mentioned the fact but no explanation of the remarkable circumstance was vouchsafed. Now people who have been attending court at the Capital are again asking how it happens that so many new standard dollars got into the State Treasury. The general Government does not pay the mint employees nor the Federal officers in such coins. It has no transactions with the State Treasurer by which seventy or eighty thousand dollars right from the mint could find their way into the State Treasury, and new standard dollars are not paid in any considerable amount by County Treasurers in settlement of taxes. As, so far as known to the public, only gold was stolen from the mint there cannot be any connection between the shortage in that institution and the surplus of new dollars in the State Treasury, but it seems strange, nevertheless, that such a large amount of silver, which apparently had never been in circulation, should be in the State Treasury at one time.

A SILVER CONFERENCE.

There are several organizations, partisan and non-partisan, which favor the free coinage of gold and silver, because they are satisfied that there is not enough of both metals to supply the requirements of money of ultimate redemption. These organizations acting independently of each other accomplish nothing except to educate the people on the monetary question. Now they propose to combine their forces against the common enemy—the gold men. The National Bimetallist Union, whose headquarters are at Chicago, and which has been fighting for silver within the old party lines, has invited the American Bimetallist League and all organizations which believe in the free coinage of gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 without waiting for the consent of any other country, to meet in conference at Washington on January 22, 1896, for the purpose of arranging for a national convention. By the terms of the invitation such organization is to be equally represented at the conference, neither to have more than twenty-five representatives.

Much will depend on the action of this conference. Money, no doubt, will be freely used to create dissensions and prevent the unification of the silver elements. It is probable that the Populists as well as the bimetallic organizations and silver Democrats will be represented, and if the gold men can prevent harmonious action they will claim the first knock-down in the fight of 1896.

LESSONS FROM THE ELECTION

DRIFTING TOWARD A SILVER PARTY.

Political Bosses, Local and State Affairs the Chief Issues.

WASHINGTON, November 9, 1895.

The recent election was one of overshadowing importance. As far as the old parties were concerned the chief factor to them was the unmasking of a number of Presidential candidates. Three things were emphasized in last Tuesday's election:

First. The probable nomination of Cleveland for a third term.

Second. The solidification of the Republicans for gold.

Third. The imperative necessity of a national silver party.

Cleveland has been talked of for a third term. Tuesday's election makes him more prominent than ever. The loss of New York retires Hill as a candidate, the loss of Ohio retires Campbell and Brice and that of Maryland Gorman. Democratic victories in any of the above States would have made Hill, Campbell and Gorman strong Presidential possibilities. In Eastern political circles it is regarded as a significant fact that these States, with their Senators, were conspicuous in opposition to Cleveland—Hill and Murphy in New York, Gorman in Maryland, Brice in Ohio and Smith in New Jersey. The last three named men were especially bitter toward Cleveland and were instrumental in forcing the Republican modified protection Wilson tariff upon the country. The loss of these States is attributed to these men personally. The sound money Democrats will now rally about Cleveland.

Inasmuch as all these States had, as far as the Republican party is concerned, sound money platforms, it will be used by sound money men as an indication of anti-silver. The result will be that next year the Republican party will stand for a Sherman-Cleveland sound money platform. The Republicans have also construed their victory into a tariff victory. The fact of the matter is that a lot of Democrats were dissatisfied with their party bosses and taught them a lesson. Also a large class of voters, tired of Democratic incompetency, changed and they voted the opposite ticket. Therefore a Republican victory ensued by default.

In New York the Sunday law was the issue, in Maryland Gorman was the issue, and in only two States do we find silver an issue—in Kentucky and Illinois (18th District). It is a notorious fact that Cleveland, the Administration and the sound money Democrats contributed as much to the Republican victory as did the Republicans themselves in those two cases.

The election disclosed that the gold men of both parties are united for gold, independent of party affiliation. Now let the silver men unite for silver. In no wise can it truly be said that Tuesday was a Waterloo for silver.

It is, however, clear that the silver men of this country must organize. There must be unity of action; there must be no other way of voting than for one or the other of the old parties. Give them a chance to vote for a new party, which has for its chief issue the greatest issue before the American people—the silver question. The idea of the silver men being divided into squads when they could unite into an organization of their own is the height of political imbecility.

CARSON MINT SHORTAGE.

THE TRIAL OF JAMES HENNEY—SIXTH DAY.

Melter and Refiner Harris, on the Witness Stand—Interesting Testimony.

(Correspondence of the JOURNAL.)

CARSON CITY, November 16, 1895. Melter and Refiner Harris—I don't know if there was one or two keys to the gold sweetening tubs. The foreman, Connors, has charge of them. It takes five or six hours to wash a charge of the nitric acid process. Don't know which is the longest process, that or the sulphuric. Never saw Connors in the refinery later than 6 p.m., and I was with him then. The workmen generally quit at 4, although I have passed them out earlier at times. Don't know what is the final disposal of their worn out working clothes. Don't know when they ate lunch, but Connors always lunched at the hotel.

Don't know if I have ever seen the key or keys to the gold sweetening tubs. Never tried to ascertain regarding them, not even since Jones was discharged. Trusted everything to Jones.

March 15th we received the last bullion from the Comstock mines. Connors was then idle for five or six months, when I made him assistant in the assay office. Never had anybody to watch him while in the refinery. Did not know of any detectives being employed to watch him and other employees.

I never handled the key of the refinery. Saw it one day in the desk. Never had anything to do with it.

In the refinery we had a day book of the operations kept by Jones. It showed shortages in August of 258 ounces and before that 1,497 ounces.

I talked to Jones about it, and he told me not to get worried, that it would come out all right in the slums. In September and October my suspicions began to be aroused that there was something wrong somewhere, especially as we were working the nitric process. Don't think I suspected shortage from the bullion turned over to me by my predecessor in that it did not contain its designated assay value.

February 9th Jones went to San Francisco for a few days. Before he went I had been studying on the subject, and from the refinery book in connection with the nitric acid process I figured out that the gold was short. I consulted with Assayer Ellis and he advised that I make a clean-up, so after Jones left I proceeded to do so. The result was that after a thorough clean-up, slum and all, I found that there was a very apparent actual shortage. From the time I came into the mint in 1894 I studied hard to acquire a knowledge of the business of my department and I learned more from Mason when he came than I ever knew before, especially about slums. The slums were from both acid processes. I reported to Superintendent Adams what I had done and found out. The first shortage I suspected was from the nitric process. Jones told me that I must be mistaken in figuring, as I would find everything all right in the outcome. I suggested to Mr. John Ullrich, a detective, that he keep a watch on both Connors and Likens, and if they had done anything wrong not to let them get away with it.

A gold bar numbered 166 of 894 ounces came to the mint in 1894, and in weighing and checking the bars in my clean-up investigation I found that bar was missing. We hunted everywhere it should be, but it was not to be found. I don't know who took it. Only Jones and myself had the combination to the vault.

I don't know how long it would take to make that spurious melt, but it could have been made in the mint and I believe it was. The deposit melter was William Pickler. I found by the record book that melt No. 77 of 2,445 ounces, registered as a gold melt, was afterward changed to No. 164, registered as a silver melt of the same weight. When the bullion was turned over in June, 1894, to the present administration this spurious melt was included.

The books of the Melter and Refiner show a deficiency in the years of 1892 and 1893, the return from 83,167 ounces sent to the refinery being 75,662 ounces, a difference of 7,505 ounces.

This bar of silver bullion shown me is one of the ten comprising the spurious melt, numbered 164 like the rest. The mould in which it is placed and which it fits exactly came from the deposit melting room. (Shown to the jury.)

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Chief Clerk Noteware recalled, testified to the mutilation of the commutation melts book. One page had been cut out and pasted back again and six pages were missing entirely. Sundry melts, amounting to over 16,000 ounces, cannot therefore be traced in this book.

Coffin—Please examine these slip I have prepared and see if they don't represent the six pages taken out of that book.

They do.

G. W. Likens recalled—There is but one key to the two gold sweetening tubs. It was kept in a bunch with the appliances of the refinery and put in the desk of which Pearce carried the key. These gold samples shown me were made a few days ago from mint bullion. They came from Assayer

Harris and I think he told me they were 980 fine.

Harris again—I received this mutilated commutation melts book from my predecessor and have never removed a leaf from it. I discovered melts 8 to 13 missing.

Thomas Connors sworn—Am employed as assistant assayer of the mint. I helped make these gold samples in the refinery.

H. H. Beck sworn—I was General Manager of the Reno Reduction Works October 14th, 1893, when a stranger introduced himself as James Henney, whom I recognize as defendant in this case, came to me with some gold to melt into a bar which I engaged to do. He stated that he and three others were working a mine which they had leased near Silver City and had discovered a rich ore body in it from which this gold came and they desired to keep it a secret or they might lose their lease. He told others employed about the works the same story, with the same caution. He said he knew it would go about 990 fine because he had partially treated and assayed it. He left on the afternoon train for Virginia. I shipped the bar to Selby & Co., San Francisco. It weighed 274 ounces and was 991 fine. The return, amounting to $5,500 30, I deposited to Henney's credit in the First National Bank, Reno. I made five bars in all for Henney, amounting to about $23,000. When I heard of the mint shortage I telegraphed to Carson for Adams to come down as I thought I could give him a clue. He came. The gold Henney brought was in granulated form resembling brown sugar.

Henry Beck sworn—Was employed at the Reduction Works when Henney had his work done. His testimony corroborated that of his father, H. H. Beck, as did also that of A. B. Eastman, foreman of the works at the time, who was also called to the stand.

C. T. Bender, Cashier of the First National Bank, Reno, testified to receiving from H. H. Beck $5,000 on deposit for Henney, also to receiving $2,500 on deposit from Henney, money loaned by him to M. Callahan on a mortgage.

Counsel for the prosecution stated they would be able to close on Monday and the defense thought they would occupy three or four days afterward, therefore the Court made an order further excluding all jurors outside of the present panel until a week from next Monday.

At 5 p. m. Court adjourned till next Monday at 10 o'clock a. m.

ANOTHER BILL VETOED.

The Auditor Thinks the County Should Not Pay for Railroad Crossings.

At the last meeting of the Board of County Commissioners a bill from the Virginia & Truckee Railroad Company for $188 15 for building cattle guards on a public highway recently opened by the Board was allowed by the Commissioners. Auditor Shearer thought that the railroads should build cattle guards on public highways and he sent the bill back with the following objections:

RENO, Nev., Nov. 6th, 1895.

Hon. Board of County Commissioners—

DEAR SIRS: With due respect for your honorable body, I am impelled to return the attached claim for your further consideration. The county has full power, through its Commissioners, to open up a highway where ever the public good demands it. If we are obliged to cross the property of a railroad company it is their duty to properly "fence" their right of way. A fence includes cattle guards when necessary. The following questions arise:

Is Washoe county liable for the expense of these cattle guards?

If Washoe county pays this claim are these cattle guards the property of Washoe county?

If a serious accident should occur at this crossing, in consequence of these cattle guards, who will be responsible for the damage that may arise therefrom?

Are we not establishing a precedent by which the county commits itself hereafter to pay for such cattle guards wherever it is necessary to establish a railroad crossing?

I do not question the sincerity of the claimant, but do question the propriety of establishing such a precedent.

Very respectfully,
B. C. SHEARER,
Auditor.

Came to the Soldier's Home.

Through the exertions of Assessor Evans and other Grand Army men, Robert Spence, an old soldier well known in Reno, was sent to the Soldier's Home at Santa Monica last evening. A delegation of comrades was at the train to see Mr. Spence off, and the hearty hand-shaking as the "old boys" bid their comrade God speed was the best of evidence of their sincerity and fraternal feeling toward one of their number. Mr. Spence regretted having to leave Reno and his friends, but felt that he was going among those who would be kind to him and to a home where he could pass the few remaining years of his life in peace and comfort.

The Mechanical Building for the University will soon be rebuilt.

No definite arrangements have as yet been made for the rebuilding of the Mechanical Building at the University, but it is thought that work will soon be commenced. There was some question whether the $4,000 received for insurance could be used at this time, as in the opinion of some of the State officers the money would have to be paid into the State Treasury and could not be drawn out without legislative enactment. President Stubbs, however, consulted the Attorney General, and it was soon found that $2,500 of the money was on the mechanical appliances, tools, etc., and was Government money and over which the State had no control. The $1,500 on the building belonged to the State and some course will have to be pursued, such as giving bonds to the State Treasurer or other security before this money can be used. President Stubbs thinks that everything can be arranged satisfactorily, and immediate action will be economy for the State. The apparatus will be purchased with the $2,500.

Superintendent Brown and Regent Deal visited the Lick Industrial School and the workshops there were considered and plans procured accordingly. Other plans are under consideration and it is proposed to put up a substantial and suitable building, one which will meet all of the requirements as well as compare favorably with the other State buildings. As soon as the plans are adopted and all details arranged, work will be commenced and pushed rapidly, so that only a month or two will elapse before this important department to the State University will be in working order.

Bad Cough—Weak and Thin—After the Grip

Look Hood's Sarsaparilla and How Feels Well.

Mr. J. C. McCabe, of Chama, New Mexico, is a well known locomotive engineer. He is a member of the Sierra Blanca, Div. No. 209, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. His occupation being such as to expose him in all kinds of weather, he was an easy prey for the grip, followed by a severe cough. He fell off in strength and weight as well as in flesh, and in fact was feeling miserable. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and what it has done for him is told in his own words:

"Last November I was seized with the grip and for some time lay around with severe cough. I was unable to follow my occupation, that of locomotive engineer. I was prevailed upon to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and since taking the medicine, I have gained in weight and I also Feel splendid.

Out of one-half dozen bottles, I have taken four, and it has benefited me greatly. I can highly recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. Several of my neighbors are now taking the medicine and speak favorably of it." J. C. MCCABE, Chama, N. M.

Hood's Pills are hand-made, and perfect in proportion and appearance. 25c. per box.

I have 300 tons of No. 1, bright alfalfa hay in Mason Valley for sale at $2.50 per ton. Good corn, feed boxes and swift running water. HENRY W. D.

CAPE COD ALBINO.
A COLONY OF PINK EYED AND WHITE HAired PEOPLE.

It is About 150 Years Old and at One Time It Numbered About Fifty Persons. The Story of the Pittsleys and Their Physical Peculiarities.

Since the appearance of albino girls in side shows and dime museums the general public has indulged in considerable speculation as to where the managers of these freak aggregations procure their frizzly haired specimens. Although seldom met with at other places, there is at Cape Cod a settlement of these pink eyed and white haired people. For generations the Pittsley family, known in the section as the "white haired Pittsleys," have been albino. They have intermarried, and, although clannish in the extreme, years ago took into the family fold a man named Reynolds, in whose children the peculiarity cropped out, and added the "white haired Reynolds" to the little army of Cape Cod's human curiosities. Until quite recently a dozen or 15 Pittsley albinos might have been found within half as many miles of each other and sometimes under the same roof. But the families in which there are albinos have scattered lately, and spread over the most lonely parts of the country from Freetown to Wareham, at the entrance to Cape Cod.

The museum albino and the albino in real life have little in common. The albino at home is disappointing. His or her hair isn't crimped to the museum limit. It doesn't stand out a la Circe. In the natural Pittsley state the albino hair is dingy, because they don't know any better, and if they did they probably wouldn't adopt the modern methods of washing hair.

The eyes of the albino in this region prove their albinism beyond question. They are usually described as pink, like rabbits' eyes. They are extremely weak and almost closed, so that it is difficult to get a square look into the eye itself. When the eye is opened, the lid is lifted only for a second, and it takes a quick look to discover that the pupil is dark red and surrounded with a lighter red ring, while the ball of the eye is pale pink and surrounded with the pinkish rim of the eyelid. The effect would be thoroughly pink if the eye remained at rest. It is almost impossible to obtain a direct look into the eye, because from the eye of the healthy albino red lights seem to dart, while the pupil quivers and dilates and seems to move unceasingly.

It is over a century and a half since the appearance of the first albino was recorded in the Pittsley tribe. Since that time probably more than 100 have been born bearing this name or having mothers from this family. At one time it is estimated that only a few less than 50 albinos were living within a radius of 25 miles. Barnum might here have held an albino congress if he had been able to engage all of these people with the wonderful wine red pupils. It has always been among the legends of the county that the great showman did recruit his collection from this locality, but today the proud Pittsleys deny indignantly that Barnum ever had money enough to engage even one of them to pose in public.

The origin of the family is connected with one of the wickedest episodes of the early history of the new world. There is even a chance that perhaps some Pittsley was a relative or friend of the sweet and pious Evangeline. When the English departed from the vales of Acadia the families of French neutrals and scattered them in almost every settlement from the mouth of the Penobscot around to Louisiana, Freetown, which was near the colony of Plymouth, had not been able to send its full quota of men to the army. So in the distribution of the French from Acadia 15 men, with some women and children, were left in Freetown. The bitterest of all was the separation and splitting up of families. The people were filled with dejection, and the poorest of them apparently built some rude lodges in the forests and took no care how they lived. None spoke their language. They were strangers in habits and manners. Men had been separated from wives and daughters, and wives left without their husbands.

Just what the name of the French neutral ancestor of the albino Pittsleys may have been no research has ever revealed. On the town records, until within 50 years, the name has been Piggsey. In many cases the name Piggsey has been corrupted into "Hogsley."

The first appearance of pink eyes and white hair was in a Robert Pittsley somewhere in the first half of the eighteenth century. Some place it as early as 1731. From that time down the albino characteristics have been continually reproduced. It is believed that continual intermarriage has been largely instrumental in handing down the pink eyes and white hair. The Pittsleys were clannish. They wouldn't mingle with other families, much less take wives from them. They clung by themselves, but often one family made a home for itself in some deserted house or jockey house in a lonely part of the woods or out of the way end of a township. They rarely came to town to live. In their ways and their love of outdoor life those people show many of the characteristics of the gypsy, and another point which allies them to the wandering clowns is their ability to "swag" horses, a business at which most all of the males are experts. They are illiterate and account for their physical peculiarities by the theory that one of their ancestors had his hair turn white after a fright and bequeathed his curious hereditary possession to his children.—Philadelphia Times.

BROKEN HEARTS IN FRANCE.
Held at Loss Account by the Law Than Broken Legs.
In no instance does the profound difference of national character in England and France appear more strikingly, says our Paris correspondent, than in the views held on both sides of the channel regarding breach of promise. Of course engagements are broken off in France as well as in England, but it is only in England that heavier damages are awarded for a broken heart than for a broken leg. The offense is all but unknown in the French law courts, whether it is that Frenchmen are less inclined to it or that the French girl dislikes bringing her sentimental troubles into court. To show English readers how incredibly prejudiced French persons of both sexes are upon this subject it is enough to say that a young lady who attempted to turn her wounded feelings into cash would be regarded as only a degree less mean than the faithless man.

The very small number of suits for breach of promise have always been supported by a plea that the lady was put to expense, and there must be evidence of an intent to deceive. Damages in any case are very small beside the royal amounts awarded by English juries. Recently an action for breach of promise a l'Anglaise was brought into the Third Paris police court. The lady and her father, as nearest friend, produced a bill showing that they were £50 out of pocket for the broken engagement. They might have had this; but, badly advised, they put on another item of £350 for the moral prejudice. The French judge did not understand this, and he dismissed the case.—London News.

CONTRASTS OF SEWING WOMEN.
Advantages of the Factory Girl in the Country Over Her Sister in the City.
You may see in any one of perhaps a hundred shops in this city colorless, sad eyed, dingily clad women bending over sewing machines amid squalid surroundings, with no outlook save through a window opening upon a sordid street. You may see in at least a score of country villages 50 miles from any great city a crowd of neatly clad, happy looking girls and women busied with like tasks, but amid clean and pleasant surroundings, with glimpses of a smiling landscape through every window.

The New York women, released from their toil, hasten home to gloomy tenement lodgings and unwholesome fare. The village girls troop from the factory to modest but clean and pleasant homes, where food is fresh and abundant. The New York sewing machine woman is an insignificant unit in a great community. She feels daily the pressure of her fellows that are ready to take her place and her earnings. She hears from embittered men and women talk of the rights of labor and the greed of wealth. She knows that her earnings would not keep some of her rich sisters in out flowers. Whenever she stirs out of her own dingy quarter, it is to see at every step evidence of the luxury in which some live and of the contrast between her lot and theirs.

The village factory girl has hardly heard that there is a labor problem. Her $200 or $250 a year, earned at the sewing machine, clothes her well, procures for her small luxuries and helps to keep the family above want. She makes little pleasure trips hither and yon when work is slack and looks forward with confidence to marriage and a home of her own, clean, sweet and comfortable. She never sees among her fellow townfolk one who has any essential comfort that she lacks, and nine women out of ten in the village have less to spend on dress than she has. She never sees a hungry or ragged person, unless it be an occasional tramp, and she hardly grasps the meaning of what she now and then hears about the lives of the poor in great cities.

The New York slave to the sewing machine lives half an hour from the heart of the western world and may, if she will, on any night see Broadway and its throngs by electric light. The village factory girl believes that she would be happy to give up all her comforts for the other's privilege of seeing at will the splendors of the great city. The New York sewing woman would not, if she could, change places with the village factory girl.
